Artist statement:

As a culture, we are increasingly over saturating ourselves with information and "activity" that can either enrich or overwhelm our lives. My artwork is concerned with the saturation of information in everyday life. It's taken me many years to understand that I was seeking to reconcile and articulate this with my art. We have new ways to connect and innovate.

With my art, I seek to hold up a mirror to the world. We also overburden our time with things that make us lose sight of what makes us happy individuals. We lose sight of what makes our mental space important. By reflecting on this, the viewer can make decisions about how they make use of their time.

I am constantly seeking new narrative influence to explore within the framework of how my approach examines the world. I strive for my art to provide a narrative that is thoughtful, nurturing, playful, and at times challenging. I want my visual representation to move beyond simple distraction. As I grow creatively, so grows the spirit and mind of the viewer.
